“ I was saddened to hear the news of my former co-worker and friend Marcia Culver Carr this week. Marcia and I had a complicated friendship back in the late 80's, but all I can think of now is how much she made me laugh. She had a really big heart and a zest for life and I have a lot of happy memories of her. She loved to play practical jokes on me; some I thought were funny and some not so much. I remember going grocery shopping one night after work and coming out of the store to find my car had been completely wrapped in saran wrap. That was classic Marcia. Another time I remember she and I had an argument on the phone and she hung up on me and the next thing I knew she was at my doorstep with a gun. Well, it was a water pistol, but she really let me have it when I opened the door. I also remember the time we went to a catfish place to get a to-go plate and on the way back home Marcia decided to throw my styro-foam plate out of the open sunroof as I was driving down the highway. So many memories of her antics are now coming back to me, I could write a book. You just never knew what she was going to do next. Yes, she was a bit eccentric, but one thing is for sure, she was never boring. They say people come into your life for a reason, I was so young and naïve, I didn't know what was going on or what in the world I was doing at the time, but I am grateful for knowing her because I learned a lot from Marcia, and I learned a lot about myself. Even though things sometimes got a little crazy, I will always cherish the memories, good and bad. We had lost touch over the past few years, but I always wished her well and I know she did me too. Marcia put her faith in God and I am now praying for comfort for all of her loved ones. Rest in Peace dear Marcia, I will never ever forget you.
